

JUSTICE (vs. CORRUPTION)

The courts of law and the political system of America have led the way to set an example for the rest of the world to "take personal responsibility to uphold what is pure, right and true." This is the very essence for which our nation has stood. "Justice."

To demonstrate justice, we operate in honesty and are equitable in our dealings with each other; we have integrity in commerce; and have agreeableness to what is right. To uphold what is right, true and pure we measure our actions against the standard of truth, the very principles upon which our nation was founded.

This standard of truth has been able to support the weight of our democracy and the heaviness of being the world leader of a system that has not been steeped in total corruption. A system that has stood for justice.

In order to continue to be leaders of the world, we must, individually and corporately, continue to uphold and demonstrate the good character trait of justice. However, to really make an impact we need to recognize that we are personally responsible to uphold what is pure, right, and true first and foremost within our personal sphere of influence. Justice begins with us.

Whatever arena you work in or spend the majority of your time in, whether it is with the arts, education, politics, media, religion, family, or business our nation needs you to lead the way by standing up for and demonstrating justice. This may not always be easy in a society that is attempting to shake the foundations and standards of truth. Yet it is vitally important to honor one another and to stand in the strength of good character by walking in justice—what is right, true and pure.

This month, take our Character Pledge and Commit to:

Respect the authority of the law

Speak out for what is pure, right and true

Never prejudice others

Always remain open to reason

Keep my own conscience clean

V isions of Character

I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America, and unto the Republic for which it stands, one Nation, under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.
